The first short story "Open" tells a tale about two daughters, Rachel and Allison dealing with their drunk father. They reminisce about their old memories of the past and see what has become of them in their current time.

The next story "The Golden Smile" is about a kid named Matt who struggles with his family, especially his father. His parents are going through something and he has to stand there and watch. He opens up about all this to his friend Barry.

Lastly, the story "Honor" is about an older man, Jim talking to his mother. He sees what he is doing with life as a normal thing. His mother has other opinions, but she mostly questions who he has become and how it relates to his father.
